

Asian Psychiatry Program

Tailored Treatments to Help Patients Thrive

Asian Psychiatry Program

Gracie Square Hospital, a member of the New York-Presbyterian Regional Hospital Network, is a free-standing inpatient psychiatric hospital conveniently located on the Upper East Side of Manhattan. We offer seven specialized programs which provide a wide range of behavioral health services and proudly achieved Planetree Gold Certification for excellence in person-centered care. GSH's Asian Psychiatry Program was established in the early 1990s and is the only private hospital-based program that offers inpatient psychiatric services catering to the Asian-American community in the New York Metropolitan area.

Culture of Care

Recognizing that cultural factors influence the way an individual views the causes and treatment of mental illness, our Asian Psychiatry Program encourages patients and their families to work within their own cultural framework to maximize successful treatment outcomes and prevent relapse. Our interdisciplinary treatment teams, composed of a psychiatrist, psychologist, social workers, nurses and nurses' aides, work closely with patients and their families to provide comprehensive assessments, immediate initiation of treatment, and planning for the eventual transition from the hospital to a community-based resource. We provide services in English, Mandarin, Cantonese, Korean and other Asian languages. Our clinicians collaborate closely with local private and community mental health programs to arrange culturally appropriate aftercare plans to ensure our patients can continue to thrive with their families in the community.

Unit Amenities

The Asian Psychiatry Program is a 15-bed unit that is designed to provide patients with the comforts of their own culture. The milieu and therapeutic activities incorporate Asian influences, with Asian décor, a daily Asian menu prepared by our in-house Chinese chef, educational materials, newspapers and television channels in English and Asian languages, and cultural celebrations of traditional and lunar holidays. Patients also have use of a beautiful rooftop garden which offers opportunities to relax as well as engage in therapeutic group activities in the fresh air.
